WISE LANDLADY.

The landlady of a certain restaurant in Brockton, Mass., has increased her busi-ness so rapidly that she has had to enlarge her dining room to accommodate the continually increasing patronage. One

"Every morning she serves her regular guests with Grape-Nuts and hot milk or hot cream in cold weather, and cold cream in summer. I began cating this food and right away began to feel an improvement in my health. I had been terribly troubled with nervousness and dyspepsia and found it impossible to find a food that would agree with me, until I began boarding at this restaurant.

my weight from 120 pounds to 145 and I never felt as well in my life as I do now. There is something remarkable in the sustaining power of this food. I have never been able to obtain such results from any other." G. K. Hersey, No. 30 L Street, Brockton, Mass.

Report as to the Ousting of Traveling

Agents. A rumor is in circulation to the effect that the great railway systems of the country have agreed to dispense with the vast army of traveling freignt and pressinger agents and other officials who go out and solicit business.

There are about 50,000 such officials in the country.

A prominent railroad-man in Richmond said the report was simply absurd.

You had just as well expect newspapers to dispense with reporters and to print no news but what is brought to print no news but want is brought to their offices by people not connected with the publications, or to expect insurance companies to seek to do business without employing solicitors, as to expect railroads ense with traveling agents," said

The gentleman further remarked that was possible that, in order to econe mize, the people who control several big systems of roads might dispense with some of their agents off their lines. For instance, the Vanderbilt and Morgan lines may each have an agent at some city not on the road. One representative could look after the interests of all the roads. But the gentleman stated that it was absolutely necessary for each road to have its freight and passenger agents to travel over the lines operated.
